The Declaration on the Strengthening of International Security contains a plethora of thoughts that have contributed to the considerable achievements reached in the field of international security since its adoption. In a time of new challenges, however, we must recognize that new ways have to be found and implemented in order to preserve peace effectively. The Secretary-General's report "Agenda for Peace" (A/47/277-S/24111) contains extensive proposals that should be drawn upon in this regard.
